

INSTRUCTIONAL GOALS

It is the basic purpose of the school system to provide a set of common learning experiences, skills, habits, attitudes and character traits essential in our culture. It shall be the definite purpose of the schools to strengthen, approve, and unify American life. Schools will instill an appreciation of the responsibilities of citizenship in our American democracy. It will be the constant aim of our schools to promote staunch moral character, appreciation of spiritual values, a love of home and country, respect for duly constituted authority, and a genuine concern for the rights and welfare of others. As a direct outcome of educational processes, the individual should be willing to act in the interest of general welfare and to assume a mature responsibility for his/her own acts in our own democratic society. The school system shall assist youth in the choice and preparation for a vocation, for living in an economy, which encourages free enterprise and individual effort.
